

1.

A view on the Karkonoska Przełęcz pass (1198 m over sea level). According to many legends and testimonies, there was the most secret Nazi's test area, where the newest and most secret flying constructions were tested during the World War Two. Some people state that there was hidden underground airfield with its hangers there. Now there are only stones, rocks and daying trees, still killing with sour rains...
(The GB JORDNOL S.A. archives)

3.

The Karkonosze mountains are as caved as a cheese. Above you can see an entry to the Vallonian mine at Piechowice. It is quite possible that during WW2 Nazis used it to their bad aims... In 17-th Century Vallons sought there cristalls and gold. Belowe - Robert Leśniakiewicz in a corridor of the old silver mine in the Dolina Sowia valley. During WW2 and shortly after it there was sought uranium ore by Germans and Soviet experts. (The JORDNOL Archive)

2.

Two places where Nazis could hide not only the legendary "Wrocław Treasure", but the V-7 documentation as well: the Witosza hill (484 m) and a ruin of the prince Henry the Silesian's castle on a top of the Grodna hill (506 m).

(The JORDNOL Archives)

4.

The German's and Italian's writtings on rocks of the Witosza hill. They were written in the WW2 time! They are a witnesses and prooves that not only Germans were there!(The JORDNOL Archieves)

There is a lot of such pits in the Karkonosze mountains. No-one knows, why they were built by Germans. Perhaps they guide to some underground rooms, but - as you can see - they are destroyed and filled with stones and ground soil. My bag is 0,5 m high, so then you can imagine yourself their dimensions... (The JORDNOL Archieves)

